Caesarea Golf Club

Founded by the Baron Rothschild's family, the original Caesarea Golf Club dates back to 1961. The course has served the golfers of Israel and visiting golfers for almost 50 years.

The only 18-hole championship golf course in Israel has been redesigned by acclaimed golf course architect Pete Dye and opened May 1, 2009 to rave reviews.

The Dye design is spectacular, spacious and welcoming. Strategy on this links style design plays a major role in scoring well. The course plays 7,163 yards (6,512 metres) off the tips but can be played from four sets of tees all the way up to a more welcoming 5,266 yards (4,787 metres).

Another factor that has dramatically improved the playing conditions of the course is the change from the more difficult kikuyu grass to the far friendlier and less water consuming paspalum grass. The Dye trademark bunkers dot the course and provide hazards for wayward shots.

One of the key new features is a spacious double-ended practice range, short game practice area and an attractive nine-hole par three course equally designed by Pete Dye and his associate, Tim Liddy. These important practice facilities will assist in the development of golf in the country, which has a population of seven million and has an active programme to develop junior golf.

Practice facility including:

- Driving range
- Chipping area and putting green
- Sand bunker practice green

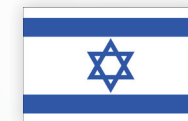

Caesarea Golf Club host to the 18th playing of the World Maccabiah Games in July 2009 when the best Jewish golfers from over 20 countries throughout the world come to Caesarea to test their skills against the new Caesarea course.

Caesarea junior Golf

Caesarea hosts an active Junior Golf Program and offers an introduction to golf and instruction to hundreds of Israeli children each year. 25% of the International Membership Dues will go to support these Junior Golf programs at Caesarea.
